Meet Triple 7 Brewmaster MATT MARINO!

Matt Marino is the man behind the beer at Main Street Station's Triple 7 Restaurant and Microbrewery. As head brewmaster, Matt is in charge of brewing the beer.

Clear glass windows in the brew pub display the tall copper brewing equipment of the brewery and most often that is where you will find Matt, literally making the beer!

A lot of work goes in to getting that one glass of beer to your table. The brewing process time from start to finish is two weeks for Ales and four weeks for the Royal Red Lager. The actual brewing process takes six hours. The beer fermentation or aging takes three to four days for Ales and seven to 10 days for the Royal Red Lager. Filtration to the serving tanks takes eight hours.

The brewhouse brews 15 barrels per batch – that's 500 gallons or 30 kegs – and has four house brews available:

High Roller Gold, Marker Pale Ale, Royal Red Lager and Blackchip Poker.

Along with the house brews, Matt always has a brewmaster special available, a rotation of some of the finest creations ever developed. Among his favorites are Raspberry Wheat, Triple 7 Hefe-Wel-Zen, India Pale ale and the famous Black Cherry Stout, a silver and bronze medalist of the 1997 and 1999 Great American Bear Festival. Recently, he featured a double Chocolate IPA for the first time.

Matt keeps the day-to-day workings of the Triple 7 in good condition, but his main focus is keeping the quality of all the beer he brews as high as possible.

On your next visit, if you see Matt behind the glass walls working, feel free to bang on the window and ask for a tour of the brewery. Matt has a passion for the business of brewing beer, and when he is available, loves to share that passion with his customers.
